1. § 21

1. Subject to individual arrangements in the Account Agreement, the Client may dispose of the monies accumulated on the Account:

- on the same working day of crediting the Account - if the Account is credited with a transfer amount in PLN,

3. In the case of payment transactions initiated by the recipient or through the recipient the Bank makes available the amount of a given payment transaction on the Account of the Client, who is the recipient, at the latest on the second Working Day after the day of crediting the Bank's account.

4. As the date of crediting the Account, that is the date of adding monies to the Account, is considered the date of entering the resources on the Account.

1. As for instructions regarding cash payments, cash withdrawals/payouts or other payment orders, the Bank shall credit or debit the Account whose number was indicated in the instruction, regardless of whether the currency given therein and the Account currency agree with each other.

2. Should the currency given in the instruction and the Account currency not match, the currency will be converted according to a relevant interest rate from the Foreign Exchange Rate Table valid in the Bank on the day the amount has been recognized in the Account.

1. In relation to currency conversions of monies on the Accounts (including these provided for in the Account Agreement, Rules and Regulations or other agreements between the Bank and the Client or the Client's instructions) applies the Exchange Rate Table which is valid at the moment of making a given conversion unless the parties defined another exchange rate or legal regulations set a different exchange rate.

2. The foreign currency buy and sell rate presented in the Foreign Exchange Rate Table is set by the Bank based on quotations of foreign currency buy and sell rates on the interbank market presented in the Reuters information service available at the moment of setting the Foreign Exchange Rate Table ("Average inter-bank exchange rate").

3. In the case the foreign currency is USD, the USD buy rate is set by deducting from the Average USD/PLN inter-bank exchange rate the value of the Bank's margin index, the USD sell rate – by adding to the Average USD/PLN inter-bank exchange rate the value of the Bank's margin index.

4. If the foreign currency is different from USD, the Average inter-bank exchange rate is calculated for a given currency by multiplying the Average USD/PLN inter-bank exchange rate by the Average inter-bank exchange rate for this given currency and USD or division of the Average USD/PLN inter-bank exchange rate by the Average inter-bank exchange rate for this currency and then in reference to the buy rate of a given currency – from the Average inter-bank exchange rate for this currency the value of the Bank's margin index is deducted, or in reference to the sell rate of a given currency – to the Average inter-bank exchange rate for this currency the value of the Bank's margin index is added.

5. The amount of the Bank's margin index mentioned in the preceding sections is set by the Bank and depends on supply and demand for a given currency on domestic and foreign markets, liquidity of the foreign currency market and the Bank's costs related to acquiring of a given currency. The value of the margin index cannot exceed 10% of a given Average inter-bank exchange rate.

6. The Bank may change the above rules for setting the exchange rates in the following situations:

- change of general legal regulations imposing on the Bank taxes or other public and legal charges, proportionally to the change of the costs borne by the Bank, . unavailability of the Reuters service,
- suspension of the USD/PLN quotations or any other currency in relation to USD in the Reuters information service,
- extraordinary change in the situation on the foreign currency market.

7. In the case of occurrence of one of the factors mentioned in the preceding paragraph, the Bank's margin index may be raised to 30%, and the Bank may set the average interbank rate for a given currency based on another objective source of information on currency rates in the interbank market.
